"HE IS COMPLETE" 6-Year-old Double Registered Stock Type Pinto/Paint Sorrel Overo Gelding, owned and exhibited by Vanessa Davidsen, Jackson, MI.

Thank you

Thank You to all IPtHA Owners and Exhibitors for a Great 2012 Show Season.

To everyone who exhibited at the 2012 Indiana Pinto Shows you all deserve a Blue Ribbon for helping make the shows run smoothly by being ready to show when your classes were called. Thanks to all the folks from the surrounding states who supported the Indiana shows and the Jubilee.

It would be impossible to put on successful shows with out a lot of support. Barbara and I would like to thank IPtHA President Cheryl Ann Walls for her support this year. Also a big thanks to the following; Wyneta Duncan, Valarie Wietfeldt, Annette Pitcher and Deb Hilbert for helping in the office and computer inputting. Thanks to Jim Yagel, Dustin Allard, Ian Hamrick, Darren Evans, Mike Vandever and Rex Runyon for setting up the arenas and driving the tractor and water wagon and Sherrin Ann Davis and Don Greenlee for working the Paddock, also Jamie Garriott, Announcer and Rex Runion, Ring Steward. Thanks to Indiana PtHA Director Annette Pitcher for registering horses and measuring Ponies and Miniatures and Bobbieann Lawrence for all of her help. To Dolores Greenlee for taking care of the Awards Banquet and to Jill Duzan and Nancy Bredemeier for furnishing show photos for the Banner.

If I have missed anyone please know that your help is appreciated.

Barbara and I thank Jim and Alex Yagel and Levi Evans for pulling stall cards and cleaning around the stall areas and grounds after each show and all the exhibitors for keeping the area around their stalls picked up.

Thanks to all of the Youth who helped with the Fund Raisers.

See you all at the Awards Banquet.

Joe and Barbara Grissom, Show Managers

President's Letter

Here we are, the end of the Indiana Pinto Show season, sad on one hand, but for those of us that were able to participate, some really fond memories. I congratulate all of those who came out and endured the rain, the bugs, or the heat, to show their lovely Pintos, watch the show, or help our club put on the event. For the most part, I believe the overall experience was a total success. We fought the storms, the floods, even the mud, but our Pinto people opened their campers and Motor Homes to shelter their friends. We even had an engagement this year...yep, in case you haven't seen the FB site...Jill and Jeff are now official. We all offer our sincere support to such a lovely couple. I have heard from several exhibitors and all who attended our shows and have indicated they WILL be back. That certainly speaks well for our club.

After our recent show in September we held a short membership meeting, which I feel a few things were discussed that need our thoughts and attention. First, we took a vote (which passed) to initiate our Indiana Club offering to host the upcoming Jubilee for the next three years. We, as a club not only are able to provide a great facility but also were able to make money for all of the clubs involved. For those of you that were not in attendance please feel free to comment to either Joe or I on this subject. Next, with Joe's schedule we may be looking at having the Banner only twice a year. One prior to the HHF and the second after the last show but before our annual year end Awards Banquet. Certainly we are open to anyone that wants to help host the Banner and please by all means, make yourself known. Joe and Barb have taken on several other jobs and can no longer commit to the necessary process it takes to keep this going. Please, help out if you can it IS after all our news that we are trying to get out there. In that respect, if you are a writer, let's hear about some stories of interest that we can put in the Banner. The results, along with the forms, do become stale to those that are not now showing, but might if we can just interest them.

I also encourage you to GET YOUR MEMBERSHIPS in for 2013! Remember, if you sit on the Board or hold an Office of any kind YOU MUST be a member or show proof that you have submitted a membership to our club as well as the National Organization by Banquet time. It's fast approaching, so do take care of this please....save us the headaches of tracking you down as to not hold up our Charter or show dates.

Along those same lines, the reservation for the banquet is now posted on the sites so please get those filled out and mailed in along with your $5.00 to attend. It's fun, and you KNOW we certainly eat well.

Again, I wish to express to ALL of those that helped put on our shows this season my heartfelt thanks....Joe, Barb, Wyneta, Val, Deb, Annette, Don, Dolores, Dustin, Ian, Jaime, Rex, Jim, Darren, and everyone that lent a hand, you KNOW who you are...see you at the October 21st Meeting in Kokomo.

Cold Weather and Feed Requirements

David W. Freeman

Extension Equine Specialist

Anyone who has managed animals in cold weather understands that cold stress affects nutritional needs. Horses will use extra energy stored in the body to maintain body temperature when temperatures are cold. The long-term affect is loss of body weight, which can be quick and dramatic if adequate nutrition is not supplied.

The first question is how cold is cold? Temperatures that are low enough to make us respond to cold by seeking shelter, shivering and bundling up with clothes may not be cold enough to significantly affect the horse's feed requirements. Physiologically, the temperature below which animals spend a significant amount of energy to maintain body warmth is termed the lower critical temperature. Hair thickness, fat cover, how well the horse has previously adjusted to cold weather (acclimation), and exposure to wind and moisture will affect the lower critical temperature for horses. This temperature for a horse that is thin with a short hair coat, unaccustomed to cold and exposed to wet, windy weather may be as high as 40° F or above. A horse that is acclimated to cold weather, with a thick hair coat and fat cover may not use appreciably more energy until the temperature drops below 30° F. Nonetheless, as a general rule, the lower end of the comfort zone for horses is lower than ours; so do not make the mistake of heating barns at similar temperatures as you would your house. Not only is this wasteful, because of ventilation problems in closed up barns in the winter, high temperatures may increase the presence of respiratory irritants.

As a general rule, a little over 1% increase in the energy requirements is needed to replace energy loss from the cold weather for each degree the temperature falls below the horse's lower critical temperature. If a horse is in good body condition, has a thick hair coat and is well acclimatized to cold weather, its lower critical temperature may be around 32° F. Exposure to a period of time that weather drops to an average of 20° F means energy requirements would increase about 12%, which would be an increase of about 2 Megacalories of Digestible Energy per day.

How to best meet increased nutritional needs will depend on your feed supplies, what the horse is accustomed to eating and how large an adjustment you have to make. In terms of supplying energy, grains have much more energy per pound than hays so increasing grain amount may be most efficient. The additional 2 Megacalories per day could be met by increasing the daily grain allotment about 1 and 1/2 pounds. You have to be cautious when adjusting grain levels, so immediately increasing the daily grain allotments to offset energy losses is not as safe as preconditioning the horses by gradually feeding more energy prior to weather extremes. The horse may consume a little extra in the weeks before cold weather is expected, and put on a small amount of fat cover. When exposed to cold weather for several days to weeks, they will most likely lose the small increases in fat cover and enter into the spring in adequate body condition for their intended needs.

Many managers meet the increased energy needs by increasing the supply of hay. Hay provides large amounts of fiber. Fiber is less energy dense than the energetic compounds in grains, so more hay would have to be consumed. With the expected energy value in alfalfa, the same example that needed an additional 1 1/2 pounds of grain might need 2 to 2 1/2 pounds of alfalfa. As the energy content of grass hay is less, the amount of grass hay to meet additional energy would be more, in this example maybe 3 to 3 1/2 pounds additional hay per day.

Meeting increased energy needs by supplying free-choice hay has some advantages. A continual supply of hay may help keep the body warm by maintaining a fuller digestive tract. The way that horses digest fiber generates significant amount of heat. This heat production in the digestive tract is thought to help keep the horse's internal temperature warmer. As such, it is recommended to maintain access to long stem forage in the winter, which means you will have to feed hay because most pasture forage is limited in the winter. As long as wastage of hay is not large, many owners find that free choice access to grass hays is an effective way to meet much of the nutrient requirement. The down side to free choice hay is hay supply may not be available and wastage may make it uneconomical.

Regardless of how much hay you supply, most winters in Oklahoma will be harsh and long enough to require some level of graining horses to meet energy needs. Again, because feeding too much grain at one time or making large changes in amounts of hay and grain too quickly can lead to colic, horses should be preconditioned for cold weather. Fat cover insulates the body from cold. Horses exposed to long periods of cold can be expected to lose body condition. Preconditioning horses by increasing their fat cover before the onset of long-term cold weather will partially offset the negative effects of losing condition during cold weather.

There are several ways horse owners can lessen the nutritional stress resulting from exposure to cold weather. The most obvious is to provide some form of shelter from wind, rain and cold. Blankets provide insulation for horses with short hair coats, such as those housed in barns under lighting programs to maintain a short hair coat for showing. Blanketing horses in turn outs or pastures has the disadvantage of increasing the risk of injury if the blanket hangs on an object. Also, horses exercising in blankets are more prone to becoming entangled if the blanket doesn't keep its position. Blanketing horses housed outside is also a problem in wet weather, as a wet blanket can have an adverse affect on keeping the horse warm.

Many pastures may provide enough natural protection without need for man-made shelters. However, those owners housing horses in areas unprotected from wet, windy weather should provide windbreaks or covered sheds. The cost of windbreaks and sheds will be partially offset by savings from feed costs. Owners have to consider herding instincts and herd pecking orders when deciding on windbreak or shed design. Those areas housing one or two horses that are compatible to one another will allow for an enclosed shed with three or four sides. However, larger groups or those with aggressive horses may necessitate a one-sided structure to lessen injuries and increase access for more horses.
